Environmental policy

Our Organisation

The mission of the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC) is to enforce company and financial services laws to protect consumers, investors and creditors. ASIC regulates and informs the public about Australian companies, financial markets, financial services organisations and professionals who deal and advise in investments, superannuation, insurance, deposit taking and credit.

Our Environmental Management Commitment

This Environmental Policy covers all the (office-based administrative) activities of the Australian Securities and Investments Commission carried out in the Commission's Sydney Office in the No.1 Martin Place Office Tower, Sydney NSW.

The Commission:

- will continually identify, promote and strive to approach best practice in environmental management systems and operations;
- is committed to making reasonable efforts to operate in an ecologically sustainable manner by preventing pollution, reducing waste and the use of energy and resources;
- will comply with all relevant Commonwealth and State/Territory environment legislation, and with the Commonwealth Government's environmental policies and initiatives as well as any other applicable requirements;
- will strive to provide an environmentally sound workplace, and progressively implement a range of environmentally sound work practices;
- will work closely with its employees, contractors, suppliers, clients and other stakeholders to develop and implement agreed environmental initiatives consistent with this policy, including through setting environmental objectives and targets;
- will explore opportunities for improved environmental awareness within our relationship with stakeholders;
- will progressively implement certified systems at other sites across Australia over time;
- will have its EMS certified to International Standard ISO 14001; and
- will make this policy publicly available on both the internet and intranet web sites.
